

MODERN CHURCH HISTORY

17th – 20th Centuries

I. The XVII Century

A. Great Britain up to 1633

1. Beginning of role of James I (1603-1625), aged 37
 - a. End of Tudors; beginning of Stuart dynasty over the British Isles
 - b. “wisest fool in Christendom,” although hailed by some as the “new Solomon”
 - c. Held to “Divine Right of Kings”: published Basilikon Doron citing OT kings sitting on God’s throne. In Scotland he had banned the work of his tutor, George Buchanan—Laws for the King of Scotland—that limited monarchical rule and saw divine power vested in believing citizens.
He purported: “The king is above the law.” Kings were not only God’s “lieutenants on earth, and sit upon God’s throne, but even by God himself are called Gods.” (cited in The Great Christian Revolution by Otto Scott, p. 140).

2. Millenary Petition to new James I – April 1603
–1,000 Puritan ministers call for a reform council after Elizabeth’s passing

3. Hampton Court Conference - Jan. 1604
 - a. Colloquy of 19 Anglican and Puritan leaders
 - b. King James, moderator, promises a few concessions – new Bible is only promise kept

4. Authorized Version — 1611

D. Continental Europe during the latter XVII Century

1. development of Age of Reason

a. influence of men like

1) Isaac Newton (d. 1717) from Cambridge

Held to biblical Christianity and loved theology; held to full deity of the Members of the Trinity, although he struggled with the “consubstantiality” of the three Persons

Bible was like a garden to him; gave Bibles to the poor

Developed mathematical calculus to prove the theories of Copernicus, Kepler, and Galileo, especially the theory of motion.

His contributions to the “laws of nature” led to a “mechanical view of the universe.” Deism began to flourish with this world view that led to Deism: a detached god created a closed system in which humans are observers (scientists) rather than divine stewards and potential “partakers of the divine nature” (2Pet 1.4).

“Nature and nature’s laws lay hid in night; God said, ‘Let Newton be,’ and all was light.”

– Alexander Pope’s epitaph for Newton

2) Rene Descartes (d. 1650)

Jesuit trained extended geometric model to all areas of learning, influencing Newton, et. al.

used methodical doubt to establish certainties:

leads to Positivism of 1800s growing interest in epistemology

“I think, therefore I am.”

b. growing toleration of and insulation of the church that was becoming either “intellectualized or pietized”

2. RC gains solidified

a. Bohemia, Austria, Bavaria thoroughly subjugated

b. Hungary (HR Empire) tolerates the Reformed church (a quarter of which remained Reformed till WWII)

c. France: Uniformity of religion

1) achieved by Richelieu and Mazarin

2) 1660 - Louis XIV calls for strict interpretation of Edict of Nantes; pressures on Huguenots

3. Jansenism: Augustinian counterattack vs. Jesuit counter-Reformation

a. Cornelius Jansen (1585-1638)

- 1) Bishop of Ypres, Belgium
- 2) disciple of Augustine
 - a) wanted to defeat Protestantism with their own weapons
 - b) “evangelical, but not Protestant; Catholic, but not Jesuitical” per his 1640 work, Augustinus

b. Beliefs

- 1) revived attacks vs. semi-Pelagianism of RCs
 - a) obedience comes only through special grace which is irresistible
 - b) particular atonement of the elect
- 2) excise all church teachings and customs not divinely sanctioned
 - a) undercut hierarchical claims of Counter-Reformation
 - b) Jansenists were basically anti-Papal

c. Results

- 1) brought open attack from Jesuits
 - a) French king made leaders revoke five points of Calvinism
 - b) military attack on stronghold at Port Royale
- 2) condemned by papal Bull “Unigenitus” (“one source”)
- 3) isolated largely to France and Belgium; separate church in Holland

d. Blaise Pascal (1623-62)

- 1) Pensees (“Thoughts”) “In Defense of the Christian Religion” (published posthumously)
 - a) opposed pure rationalism of Descartes
 - b) evidentialist: God of the scripture validated by prophecies, miracles, and self-authentication of Scripture; yet conceded that rational proofs are insufficient: “faith enlightens reason”
 - c) God is known only through faith, a gift from God Himself
- 2) Provincial Letters
 - a) Jansenist, satirical attack on casuistry of Jesuits
 - b) salvation by grace
- 3) Paschal’s wager about man’s destiny

	God Exists	God Does Not Exist
Wager for God	Gain All: Heaven	Status Quo: Boring

c. doctrines

1) passive contemplation of the divine while waiting for God to break into one’s consciousness

2) disregard of spiritual exercises and even of one’s own salvation

3) “mystical death”

5. Pietism in Germany

a. Principles

1) Reform of pastoral methods: saw dogma as useless (but see John 7:16,17); stressed pastoral visitation

2) Regeneration was its dominant theme within the lifeless orthodoxy of the state Lutheran church

3) The struggle against personal evil emphasized subjective introspection which often degenerated into morbid preoccupation

4) Reason (in the form of dogmatic theologians and rationalistic free-thinkers) was condemned leaving Pietism a rather sterile theological force and probably contributing to its decline after 1750

5) It emphasized communal responsibility in the Church

b. Leaders

1) Philip Jakob Spener (1635-1705)

a) Lutheran scholar who went beyond justification to emphasize sanctification

-revival interest swells after his series of messages on the Sermon on the Mount

-personal concern in catechizing

-call for active cells of pious Christians in each congregation (parallels to monastic tertiates)

b) Published Pia Desideria (1675) which advocated reforms that would give more life to worship and advance personal Lutheran piety

c) organized “centres of fellowship,” but was against Separatists who would establish churches independent of the State Church

2) University of Halle (1694) sponsored by Friedrich the Great, King of Prussia as a model of modern academia

a) Founded to promote Pietism

b) connected with other institutions: orphanage, press, dispensary, Bible institute, and various other schools

- 1) dissenters who registered and subscribed to orthodox Articles of Religion could preach
- 2) penal acts vs. dissenters went unenforced
- 3) CoE becomes latitudinarian in demanding conformity to authority, but also in doctrine
- 4) Puritanism waning in England
 - a) discredited by excesses (?) of Protectorate
 - b) most had been harried out of the land

6. John Locke's contributions (1690)

a. Second Treatise of Government

- 1) men have inherent, “natural” rights like collective authority and self-rule
- 2) men voluntarily set up government over themselves by means of a social “contract”
- 3) justified English Revolution (and later American)

b. Essay Concerning Human Understanding (1690)

- 1) empirical philosophy vs. Cambridge Platonists and Descartes

- 2) “tabula rasa,” a Pelagian anthropology that strikes at original sin

c. Reasonableness of Christianity (1695): while supporting much of traditional Christianity, he revealed Deistic tendencies

7. Other Religious Trends in Enlightenment England

a. Deism

With Puritanism and established religion waning at the beginning of the 18th Century, Deism of the late 1600s became the designer religion of the intelligentsia.

1) A product of its times

Deism was the child of the age of reason. It served as a transitional understanding of God between the times of the Reformation/medieval Catholicism and modern anti-supernaturalism. It originated in England, especially among the upper classes, and spread to the continent.

A religion of reason (man's reason and impressions are the measure of God, not vice-versa), Deism "...set forth a system of belief in a transcendent God who left His creation after He had created it to be governed by natural laws discoverable by reason. God thus became an 'absentee God'" (Cairns, 1st edition, p. 408).

2) Key tenets of Deism: 1) a benign creator, 2) the basic goodness of mankind, and 3) the omnipotence of the state (the common mind/reason of men).

3) Key leaders

a) Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Father of Deism (d. 1648)

His five elements of religions

- i. God exists
- ii. it is our duty to worship Him
- iii. worship is virtuous
- iv. man needs to repent of his sins (n.b., no sinful nature—just bad acts)
- v. there are rewards and punishments in the next life

b) David Hume (1711-1776). Hume denied God's miracles and anything supernatural in the natural world.

One of the sad fruits of Deism was its influence on the leading thinkers of the French Revolution, J.J. Rousseau, Voltaire, and Diderot. T. Jefferson, B. Franklin, and Tom Paine in America were also Deists.

* Rationalism's trending denial of God's imminence, coupled with the Enlightenment's "ascending man," engendered some resistance from people longing for human spirituality. Evangelical Pietism, RC Quietism, and English Quakerism are reactions vs. Deism and human autonomy.

b. Growing mysticism in England: the Quakers

1) Quakers were a reaction against

a) Deism and a cold, mechanical worldview growing out of the age of reason. Stressed immanence of God.

b) Abuses of established religion led to unstructured, spontaneous services

2) George Fox (1624-1691)

Son of a Presbyterian minister; he gave up on organized Christianity when another Presbyterian minister failed him in the advice George was seeking as a youth

3) “Society of Friends”

Was established by Fox as a reaction against institutional Christianity. When Fox was called before a judge for his anti-establishment activities, he warned the judge to “tremble before the Word of the Lord.” Out of that occasion the Society was given the derisive name of “Quakers” by the judge.

4) Beliefs

a) Opposition to institutional church. No sacraments, established clergy, nor objective preaching

b) “Inner Light”: Mystical experience of the individual given weight over Scripture

c) “Feeling the medium” = A democratic expression where the majority sentiment of the group prevails over one individual’s judgment.
